EQUITABLE CO-OPERATIVE BUILDING ASSOCIATION. Washington, D. C., Oct. 30, 1892.

The 14th annual meeting of the Equitable Cooperative Building Association will be held WEDNESDAY, Nov. 1, 1893, at 7 o'clock p.m., at the office of the association, Equitable building, 1003 F st. n.w. JNO. JOY EDSON, Secy. SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

I desire to inform the public, and those for whom I have successfully catered for the last thirty-five years, that all articles of pastry and edibles prepared and furnished by me to my customers are composed of the very best mate-rials obtainable.

edibles prepared and furnished by me to my customers are composed of the very best materials obtainable.

Being the originator of the idea of furnishing supplies to the DAIRY LUNCH ROOMS of this city, I wish to assure the public that all articles furnished those places by me are prepared with the greatest care, by the very best workmen, and are composed of the best materials procurable in our markets.

Having moved to my new place of business, No. 815 Tenth street northwest, which I have equipped with all the modern appliances and improvements appertaining to my business. It is my determination to keep up to the highest standard of excellence, and that all articles furnished by me to my customers shall not be surpassed by any one.

We, the undersigned, do hereby attest, from our personal knowledge, that all articles used by Mr. F. Freund, in the preparation of the pastry and edibles furnished by him to his customers and dairy lunch rooms, are pure and of the most wholesome character, and are the best that can be procured in the market.

ABOUT PARTY ORGANS.

What an Experienced Journalist Has to Say About Them.

E. B. Wight, in Chicago Inter-Ocean: It start a daily newspaper here, which is to died suddenly of heart disease at his ho be a party organ. The experiment is re-garded by many experienced journalists as a hazardous experiment in this peculiar city, where there are neither politics nor voters. The field seems to be already filled with newspapers which are not organic. ington Post, edited, owned and managed by Frank Hatton and Beriah Wilkins, is one of the most successful of recent newsrectly to us for it. We can supply you with paper enterprises anywhere. The paper is now moving into a splendid new marble building here, which is said to have been erected from a year's profits. But the Post has not achieved its success as an organ. The present proprietors bought the plant Repealed the high prices that have been so long in vorue with the tailoring fraternity. Heretofore it used to take at least one-half more to dress you men. But now-just think of it—a perfect tailored Suit, made to your measure—to fit you to the "QUEEN'S TASTE"—all for the MODICUM sum of $15. Where else can you get so much MUCHNESS for so little LITTLENESS?

MERTZ AND MERTZ, 906 F street n.w., made it successful by great tact and rare 6 to 5.

The Evening Star has become one of the most successful and profitable of newspaper properties in America, and its owners at-tribute their success to their independence. Administrations come and administrations Administrations come and administrations go, but The Star runs on forever. If any of the members of any administration do not like its comments they probably smother their indignation when they learn that members of former administrations have had the same experience and are gone, while The Star lives, and its owners could buy out all the cabinet and not feel the burden. The Evening News is a later comer, but claims to be independent. If it shall fall claims to be independent. If it shall fall of success in this peculiar locality many will think the cause will be that it fails to be as independent as it assumes to be and tends toward the organic.

A Graveyard of Newspapers. But another experiment at organic journalism is to be tried by the democratic party in this city, where there are no elections, and where the fundamental principles of the republic is violated-that there shall be no taxation without representation. This attempt calls attention to the fact so often mentioned, that Washington has been the graveyard of newspapers. It has been the graveyard of newspapers. It certainly has been the graveyard of many. For this there is good reason. There is spinal affection, and during this time his life has been despaired of on several ocvery little here upon which to base the hope for the establishment of successful party for the establishment of successful party newspapers. The material conditions essential to permanent party journalistic prosperity are wanting. The population nominally is about 260,000. Of this number, a very large percentage is colored, a portion of which cannot read and of those who do read many do not care to pay subscriptions for daily newspapers. The transient population is here through a scanty half year. There is little commerce. The only business interests upon which a newspaper measurement. interests upon which a newspaper may rely for pecuniary assistance are those of the local retail tradesmen. The rates of composition are high. Presses and paper cost money. Writers must have bread, however money. Writers must have bread, however little and however stale; so that it is not a difficult task to establish a newspaper here which will approximate in its expense the outlay of a metropolitan daily, while receiving a very insignificant portion of the receipts of such a daily. The democrats will discover that they cannot establish a newspaper in Washington now upon the same basis that they did when newspapers were merely the organs of party. papers were merely the organs of party.

Journalism in Washington stands sometimes closely connected with the government, but the days of mere organs here are
